Personal Essay

Some students have a background, identity, interest, or talent that is so meaningful they believe their application would be incomplete without it. If this sounds like you, then please share your story.

The red kisses the canvas and suddenly the room bursts into life. Love and war are ravished from east to west with every stroke of my brush. To me it is what resembles my constant outbursts of emotion, and the tears that I cry within myself, but can never show. Scarlet evolves into an orange, I get a warm sunny feeling as I think of the sun hitting my chest and children playing in the background - even my hands tingle with energy and I hum a little tune. I love this part of me, and I want it to embody the whole of my work.

I move onto a bigger brush and make wide strokes, trying to spread my happiness all over the pale canvas. But there is an underlying sense of doom, a truth that I know but do not want to accept. Yellow cannot dominate the surface, there are many more feelings other than happiness that I need to explore and staying on a solitary color is not an end to my means.

I let a bit of blue seep into my painting, and watch it get acquainted with the yellow in small powerful swirls that soon turn into a maddening verdant, which spreads trying to colonize the surface. I move for my tissue paper, trying to blot out the sudden insurgence that has penetrated both the canvas and my heart- but I know it is not allowed. The color must express itself and I must be allowed to feel the energy ebb away. I let it spread onto the paper, only controlling its flow whenever it gets too ambitious. It reminds me off my rush and excitement to seek out new things; my inquisitive nature is materialized in the waning green.

Finally, the blue overwhelms the yellow; green slips to a subtle aquamarine. I take a deep breath and watch the color that embodies calm. Perhaps this is the color I hate most, it is the opposite of what I am. I let the question hang in my head. What am I? My mind then screams out: I am energy and unrest, an unwillingness to ever settle down. I want to explore, to pierce through all aspects of life. I am a desire for knowledge. Deep, bright swirls of yellow and orange. My destiny is to influence others and spread the warmth that I feel. I try painting the blue in such a manner, sharp, disjointed strokes that I hope will make it appear violent, like a sea in the middle of a storm. But the calm persists and I realize that I will have to accept that there are things that I cannot change, constants in my life that sometimes seem to drag me down. I take a breath, and allow this reality to penetrate me. Finally, I concur with this truth, and in the unfamiliar waters, I find rest.

There is little canvas left to paint. I have almost gone full circle and can feel the piece assuming its full form. The blue merges with the red. Purple marks the spot where it all meets, where the finish and the start collide to make a full composition. I drop my brushes and stare at my work. Stare at me. My emotions and feelings projected from my mind to my canvas.

People say I am weird when I define myself by colors, by strokes of a brush. They expect me to conform to a boring monochrome, perhaps a dull shade of beige. But I find totality in my love of art. Each time I finish a piece, some part of me is liberated - let free to roam around the universe, affecting the world as it pleases, only to be rebirthed when begin another. In each of my paintings, I find completion.

Painting is who I am, it is what I feel. It is me.

Discipline & School Interruption

Education Interruption

I have no interruption to report

Have you ever been found responsible for a disciplinary violation at any educational institution you have attended from the 9th grade (or the international equivalent) forward, whether related to academic misconduct or behavioral misconduct, that resulted in a disciplinary action?

No

Have you ever been adjudicated guilty or convicted of a misdemeanor, felony, or other crime?

No

Academics

As of this moment, what academic areas seem to fit your interests or goals most comfortably? Please indicate up to three.

Other Academic Interests? Engineering Sciences - Environmental

Other Academic Interests? Sociology

Why do these areas appeal to you?

Passion. Freedom. Risks.

This is who I am. Not a precast mold of what I should be.

For me, architecture is the ultimate embodiment of these ideals. It provides a freedom of expression and exploration of new ideas on a massive scale. Studying Environmental Science will enable me to tackle pollution and environmental degradation, which is a prominent problem in my country. Whether I'm designing a community hall or developing new sources of green energy I want to use my creativity and innovation to impact the built environment in a way that will better it for my country.

Additional Questions

Why Yale

Being a romanticist I have always imagined myself going through camp Yale as I officially join the bulldogs. The blue book will help in my dream of learning as many things as possible. I dream of winning a Yale College Freshman Summer Research Fellowship in my first year and I know I will.

A lover of art, the Gothic architecture of Yale and the Yale gallery just make Yale my ideal home. I imagine myself to watching their Monday performances at Mory's and on Tap Night officially joining The Whiffenpoofs. Why Yale? Simple, I am a Bulldog: Bow-wow-wow Eli Yale!

Essay

Midnight Conversations: Part 1

It's me again, I was wondering if we could talk. You know, just like we did the other time last month?

I love observing human beings. How we do the same thing over and over again. How we are always in the grind. See how our different cultures, society traditions and lifestyles all interact to form a congealed web called life. The view from down here is interesting. But from up there, where you can see all that we do – it must be incredible.

I'll share a secret with you Mr. Moon – you seem to have a kind phase.

I want to be different.

It's a pipe dream I know. And it's been clichéd so often that I'm sure somewhere on your dark side you are rolling your eyes, or craters – take your pick. But surely you must understand the feeling, the desire to be the center of the universe, to have everything you know revolve around you and be able to change things. Move things. I've seen you pull the waves back each night, and send them out again in the morning. You must understand then.

You know why I am divergent. Why, like your ever changing visage, my interests are diverse and shift easily. You too seek fulfillment. Do you not take sport in altering your shape and color to suit your needs? I wish it was as easy for me as it is for you. To be able to express my love for painting in the buildings I create. You know, like in that game you watched me play as a child, connect the dots and discover. This is my chance to join the dots, and explore a galaxy of opportunities open to me.

You must also know how it feels, to be lost in the shadow of someone else. Always reflecting the light of your bigger brother – the sun, and never radiating any light of your own. Don't worry, I understand. I too have been eclipsed by society's expectations of me. My father wants me to be a man - get a manly education (engineering and medicine in his opinion), and work in his field of biomedical research. But I am not my father. I want to be an Architect, artist, and a computer scientist at the same time, something he doesn't approve of. Why can't I forge my own path and plot my own orbit? Choose what I want to be for myself, and live up to my dreams?

Surely you must understand.

We may be different, you and I, on planetary levels, but somehow, we are the same. We are oddballs, misfits in a universe around us. We are the ones with ambitions to change things. You remember the time I stood up against the students who refused to acknowledge the prefect because he was from another minority tribe? Like you, what I lack in atmosphere, I make up for in gravity. Somehow, just like you, I am out of this world.
