

How to use the Values Exercise:

The values exercise is designed to help students in brainstorming possible topics for their essays.

For the Engineering example on page 3, the idea is that you go through the entire value list, writing the letter E next to each value you feel a good Engineer should possess. This exercise on page 3 can be used for anything, from Science to Math to Literature to History, and it is helpful in developing a common theme for your application, hence can be employed in other aspects of the application and not just the essays alone.

Keep in mind that this is not a rigid framework of how or what you should write, this is just an ideas resource. Some students end up writing something they generated from such exercises, some students don't. Overall, it serves as a nice thinking aid.