

EXTRACURRICULAR ACTIVITIES AND HONORS

EXTRACURRICULARS

- This is where you get the opportunity to tell colleges more about who you are outside the classroom
- You're not limited to school-related activities
- Anything that you are actively and productively involved in can be considered as an extracurricular activity e.g. having a job or taking care of family members
- You'll be required to reflect on:
 1. What drew you to the activity
 2. How you benefited from the activity
 3. What you've learnt

What we'll focus on:

01

How many activities
you should list

02

Which activities you should report

03

How to report your activities

01

How many activities you should list

- The common app gives you room to report only 10 activities
 - <10 Activities: There's no problem because colleges prefer to see few activities that you've made a significant dedication to than several activities that you've had lesser involvement in
 - >10 Activities: Look for quality over quantity - significant time investment and experiences you learnt from

If you have >10 activities which you feel you've significantly invested in, consider adding them to the 'Additional Information' section - must be VERY important.

02

What activities you should report

Step-by-Step Guide to Choosing your Activities

03

How to report your activities

ACTIVITY NAME

- 50 characters limit
- Be as detailed as possible within the word limit to save as much room as possible in the next section

ACTIVITY DESCRIPTION

- 150 characters limit
- Should be a breeze for Twitter enthusiasts
- Transfer what you had previously listed down in their order of importance
- Focus on yourself and the role you played in each activity

GENERAL TIPS

1. Avoid complete sentences to save on space. Instead, use action words and short phrases to describe your activities
2. Be specific! Emphasize the numbers of what you did. How many people joined the club because of you? How much did you raise in a fundraiser?
3. Don't exaggerate or lie about what you've done, BUT also make sure you aren't so modest. It's your time to shine!
4. If you're creating a hook in your application, be strategic when listing your activities
5. If you have many unrelated activities, try grouping them according to the themes they appeal to
6. You can combine multiple similar activities under one heading if none of them is individually significant enough
7. Avoid extreme language
8. Do not confuse extracurriculars with academic awards!
9. Build connections between your activities - E.C essay

Honors

Accomplishments achieved through hard work and effort in High School.
Can be academics or non-academic too.

- 5 slots - 100 character limit
- They should reflect your talents and awards.
- You might think you have nothing to write or worthy to note and that would be wrong.
- A common misconception is that you are supposed to write well known, most prestigious and ostensibly impressive awards.
- Any academic recognition fits right here.

Need to Know:

- Honors can be school-wide, local, regional or national level awards.
 - School-wide examples are biology student of the year, Honor roll, class ranks. Etc.
 - National level can also include your national rank in KCSE (nothing is too obvious or big)
 - How you report is similar to extracurricular activities. Brief but clear.
 - You also have to quantify the value of the award to make it more impactful.
 - If you have so many honors, pick those that are most selective/competitive.
 - Also include those that are most relevant to a potential major you are thinking about.
-

THANKS

ANY QUESTIONS?

OUR TEAM

Tony Munene

Rising freshman at Yale

Eddy Ogola

Rising freshman at MIT

Emmanuel Kwizera

Brandeis University
Class of '23

Tom Ratemo

Rising freshman at Northwestern

