DEAR ADMISSIONS COMMITTEE,

RE: TEACHER RECOMMENDATION LETTER FOR IVY MAYENDE ADM. NO. 9013

It is with great pleasure that I recommend Ivy Mayende to your prestigious university. I have known her for four years as her teacher of English. I have also been able to interact with her during several student-teacher forums. During this period, Ivy was an outstanding student and managed to influence me not only as a teacher but as an individual.

Ivy was undeniably the best student in my class. Her performance in examinations was excellent and she was always consistent and this is evident in her performance in the national examination where she scored an A. Apart from that, she would always volunteer to teach her fellow students while I was away or help the weak students who eventually registered an improvement in their scores.

What amazed me most about her was her passion for women empowerment. Ivy would always light up with joy whenever I gave stories about astounding women in the world of literary works. She looked up to one character, Resian, in one of our set text Blossoms of the Savannah by Ole Kulet, who was resilient, ambitious, and determined. Her participation in discussions on this subject was remarkable. She, therefore, took on challenges with sheer determination and fearlessly, unlike other girls. During lessons, she never failed to challenge the rest of the class with insightful and well-thought-out ideas that left others in utter admiration of her.

Amidst her academic prowess, Ivy is a very compassionate student and individual. She was a student who deeply cared about the welfare of others. I particularly remember a day in her first year of study when she came to me for advice on how to help a classmate who was having difficulties adjusting to the new high school routine. This demonstrated her big heart in helping others as well as her problem-solving skills. She was empathetic and would always help other students facing emotional turmoils by counseling them and providing a shoulder for them to lean on.

It would be an injustice not to mention her hard work. Ivy was always a top performer in my subject. She particularly shone in her essay writing. She worked tirelessly to improve her writing skills and in the end, she wrote remarkable essays that I would use as examples to the rest of the class. Her good literary skills would always be showcased in the school's yearbook. She would write heart-wrenching poetry and compositions that would leave the whole class dwelling on her words.

As the patron of the school's St. John Movement and World Scholars' Cup Movement, I enjoyed having her as a leader in both. She would regularly organize first aid training sessions for the junior St. John cadets and volunteer to command the club's weekly drills. She also proved to be a very apt Debater and a high ranking official in both the Debating Club (Secretary-General) and World Scholars Cup where she steered her team to Yale University's Tournament of Champions in 2018. This was after emerging the 4th best team out of 400 African teams in the Barcelona Round.

I would also like to highlight her outstanding participation in other school activities. She captained the school swimming team to their first East African Sports' Championship and actively led the Mathematics team to various competitions around the country during weekends. What amazed me was not that she was able to take part in all these activities but that she was able to do so and still excel in her studies. This trait saw the school elevate her to the position of the Games Captain. As a leader, she was meticulous in her work and also commanded the respect of her peers.

I hold her in the highest esteem and strongly recommend her for the opportunity she is seeking as I have great confidence in her and her skills.

Yours faithfully,

Allan Kemei,
